Maria Isabel Pastor holds a Master of Law degree in Business Law (2009) and a Diploma in Corporate Taxation (2009) from Universidad de Los Andes, at Santiago de Chile; and obtained her Juris Doctor degree from Universidad de Lima (1993).

Maria Isabel Pastor is admitted to practice law both in Peru and Chile. She has developed most of her career in Santiago de Chile, where she has held positions of Chief Legal Officer at an international holding company and lawyer at the legal department of a Chilean holding company. In her 18-year career she has specialized in corporate, business and real estate law.

Her work includes being part of teams for international transactions (teaming with American, European and Latin American law firms) and providing corporate advisory to Chilean, American, Mexican, Venezuelan, Colombian, Panamanian, Guatemalan and Salvadoran companies. Furthermore María Isabel has represented buyers and sellers in international real estate transactions and advised in other real estate contracting engagements (timesharing contracts, water rights agreements, mining agreements, planning and development of real estate projects – including the Ciudad Curauma Valparaíso-Chile Project- and drafting of co-ownership regulations and easement regulations for urban real estate projects). Furthermore, Maria Isabel has advised in the acquisition of foreign and Chilean companies, in the planning and structuring of international protection licenses for different varieties of vegetables, in the drafting of international licenses for mass-consumption products, and given general corporate advice to a number of companies (incorporation and operation), including advice in English to a group of American companies.
